

Mr. Barber's letter to the editor of May 6 on Global Warming was misleading in so many ways that I thought a good reply would be providing your readers with a site for an alternate view. Denial does not produce solutions, and I see nothing but denial on the website he listed

For excellent coverage on the subject of global warming the National Academies website is very informative at www.nas.edu/climatechange. The National Academies consists of the National Academy of Sciences, National Academy of Engineering, Institute of Medicine, and the National Research Council and provide a public service by working outside the framework of government to ensure independent advice on matters of science, technology, and medicine.

The National Wildlife Federation also provides an excellent site at www.nwf.org, where you can browse to your heart's content on a variety of issues that include Global Warming. Having just returned from the Annual Meeting of the National Wildlife Federation, and being the president of their state affiliate, the Arizona Wildlife Federation, I can tell you these folks are not in the business of either lying or swindling. Arizona and the nation face unprecedented challenges to our wildlife, habitat, and way of life that cannot be ignored.
